Map showing the approximate extent of the volcanic aquifers of the Northwest and the current study area. The volcanic aquifers cover most of the Pacific Northwest basaltic-rock aquifers and are surrounded by areas where the groundwater systems have been extensively studied.